Lac La Biche Conducts Exercises In Honor Of Grade Twelve Students

During Lac La Biche graduation exercises, E. Torgunrud, Superintendent of Lac La Biche School Division, in addressing the graduands in the Memorial Hall on September 8, told the class that "upon you rests the responsibility of taking up where older hands can no longer carry on."

"It has been said many times, but we must never forget it, that although we may be proud of our oil, other minerals, agricultural lands, trees, fish and multiple other resources, all these gifts from God through nature become null and void unless their conservation and use are placed in competent hands, your hands. I feel that what this world needs today is not adults to remind you that you are just teenagers, with problems that stem from poor parents, poor schools, inactive churches and other causes resting outside of yourselves, but that God gave you life and expects service to Him and mankind in return. By the same token, we as adults must not neglect to seize every opportunity to share our learning and experience with you."

Mr. Torgunrud went on to describe the structuring of the situations in which the graduands as they went out in the world to seek higher education or positions in the business world would find themselves. He said there would be certain general patterns of organization in all situations. There would be the interna and the externa. The interna would consist of the organization itself, the formal part, the informal groups forming within the formal structures and finally the individuals which make up these informal group and formal organizations.

The superintendent went on to describe the externa, the community in which the student works, it will also have the political system which will control the working of the formal organization.

Coming back to the formal organization, Mr. Torgunrud explained that in the formal organization there are roles — owner, director, principal, superintendent, etc. As soon as you have a certain role then expectations for that role are developed. The owner will have certain expectations for himself, his employees will have expectations of him and the owner will have expectations for his employees. As these expectations become known, it will effect the behavior of all the members connected with the formal organization. Sometimes the expectations will change and, consequently, the behavior. This then is the first part of the formal organization.

He said that the informal organization is the second part. Within the formal organization there will be opportunities for smaller groups to form, it may be the boxing club, the group who bring their lunch at noon, the teachers of science, the field engineers. There is a particular kind of climate that developes around this group and the members which belong to the group, soon realize that although the group is informal, it has developed norms or rules of its own.

Mr. Torgunrud explained that this was understandable when you realize that the group came together in the first place because they had at least one common interest, and a member of that group would be expected to behave in a particular fashion to the rest of the staff, be they above or below in rank.

A third part of the interna are the individuals, Mr. Torgunrud said, which make up the informal and formal organization. These individuals have needs. The individual may be either self-directed or other-directed. This will influence how he will behave in certain circumstances. Now then you have the expectations of the formal group, the norms of the informal group and the personality needs of the individual, determining how he will behave. He cautioned his listeners to watch for this structure in action as the day would come when they were called to accept more responsibility, they would be better prepared to do so.

The superintendent went on to explain the second major division of the working situation, the externa. "This," he said, "is first of all the community in which you live. Each community has its own customs and mores. When a certain situation arises certain behavior is acceptable, others are not. What is acceptable or not acceptable is determined by the values which the community holds. These may have their grounding in religious doctrines, they may stem from a moral emphasis. Nevertheless all have been built up through tradition and are not easily changed or lightly broken. You, in your working situation, will have to work in a community and it will serve you well to learn the values and mix these as well as you can without sacrificing the values you yourself hold dear."

Mr. Torgunrud also said that the graduand would find the influence of formal government determining some of his actions in the formal organization where he works. He would feel the influence of political forces. "We have chosen to govern ourselves by representation of the people, a

Mizrachi Movement Officers Present New Year's Message

The following New Year's message was issued by the Mizrachi Movement of Canada through its officers, Joel Sternthal, President, and Rabbi S. M. Zambrowsky, National Chairman:

As we are about to usher in the new year 5723, we find the world of men is again in the crucible of change. We are all being tested. The year that is about to pass finds mankind once again at the crossroads, facing the alternatives of peace and war, life and death.

The high hopes for a new world, entertained at the end of World War Two, have ended with disillusionment. The horrors of contemporary experience notwithstanding, nations pursue the old beaten tread of doom. It is in such an atmosphere that Israel is ushering in its New Year.

The Jewish New Year, according to Jewish teaching, is associated both with the ideas of creation and divine judgment for all mankind. Rosh Hashonnah, or the Jewish New Year, recalls the creation of the world which God has entrusted to the care of the human being. Therefore, on this day of judgment, all have to answer as individuals and as nations, whether they have maintained the world as a divine cosmos, fit to be blessed by God's light and presence, or transformed into a world of chaos spreading darkness and gloom. This is the challenge which the New Year's days of judgment place upon us, and which dare not be ignored, particularly in this atomic age when the whole of our social order is threatened.

In this season of stocktaking, it is important to recognize the well-established fact that the malady of the modern world is not so much political or economic as it is religious and moral. We are living in a civilization that has created so much to live with but so little to live for. If mankind is to survive and prosper, it must restore the true values of life which give meaning and purpose to living.

The Mizrachi Movement, which now celebrates its 60th anniversary, looks back with pride upon its achievements, in which it carried the message of Israel's spiritual heritage, and did not succumb to the change of times which brought about the spiritual deterioration of the world we are witnessing today.

We see in the rebirth of the State of Israel, in these difficult days, not only the rebirth of Jewish independence buts as a vindication of our spiritual and religious way of life, and we therefore approach the New Year with greater determination for the preservation of these values in life, which will bring through the spiritual message of Israel, peace to all men, and the realization that only by seeking the welfare of others can we find our own peace and happiness.

A Happy New Year to all!

value which many have fought for, some have given their lives, many their limbs, their minds and other members of their bodies, but all have considered worthy of defence. If we are not satisfied with it let us work for the improvement of it, but we can not ignore it, because its influence is felt everywhere."

In closing his address, Mr. Torgunrud urged the graduands to "Find your place, roll up your sleeves and return the service which God demands for the life He has given you."

Other class histories included:

PETER SHEWCHUK . . .

From the time that Peter started in Grade one,
He was fond of pranks and full of fun.
He didn't believe a person should be
Too serious about studies or things like these;
Not all of his skills were learned in school,
We hear he is an expert at shooting pool.
When he pitches baseball, the umpire's shout,
Most often is "Strfike three—you're out."
We'll remember Peter as a fun loving lad,
And when he leaves us we'll all be sad.

GORDON McCORMICK . . .

We were happy when tiny Gordon came to join our clan,
For he fitted in nicely with each little plan;
In hockey he was crafty, speedy and light,
And never got ornery and never started a fight.
While in public Gordon is quiet and shy,
But with his friends he is lively and spry;
Gordon does not seek great heights and glamour,
He enjoys working for Mr. Hamar.

DONALD STUBBERFIELD . . .

When Donald was little he was quiet and shy,
He never asked silly questions though he wondered why;
Altho' Donny was not tops in class,
In music he always did surpass;
But to Calgary to study radio operating he will go,
And there he'll do his best we know.

IRENE SACHKO . . .

From Hylo came this bonnie dark lass,
Where she was always tops in class;
In Lac la Biche she did as well,
As by her marks we well can tell.
Math 30 she found was not much fun,
But sighed with relief when she made 51;
And now the boys all shed a tear,
As the sad news they sorrowfully hear;
For with all her laughter, grace and charm,
Irene has decided to be a school marm.

ANDREW LANGEVIN . . .

On April first this little chap arrived,
And for 18 years he has survived;
In school he did well,
But his marks slowly fell
When he purchased a Studebaker,
To earn money for gas he missed many a class;
Now a young doctor he wishes to be.
A successor to Ben Casey soon we will see.

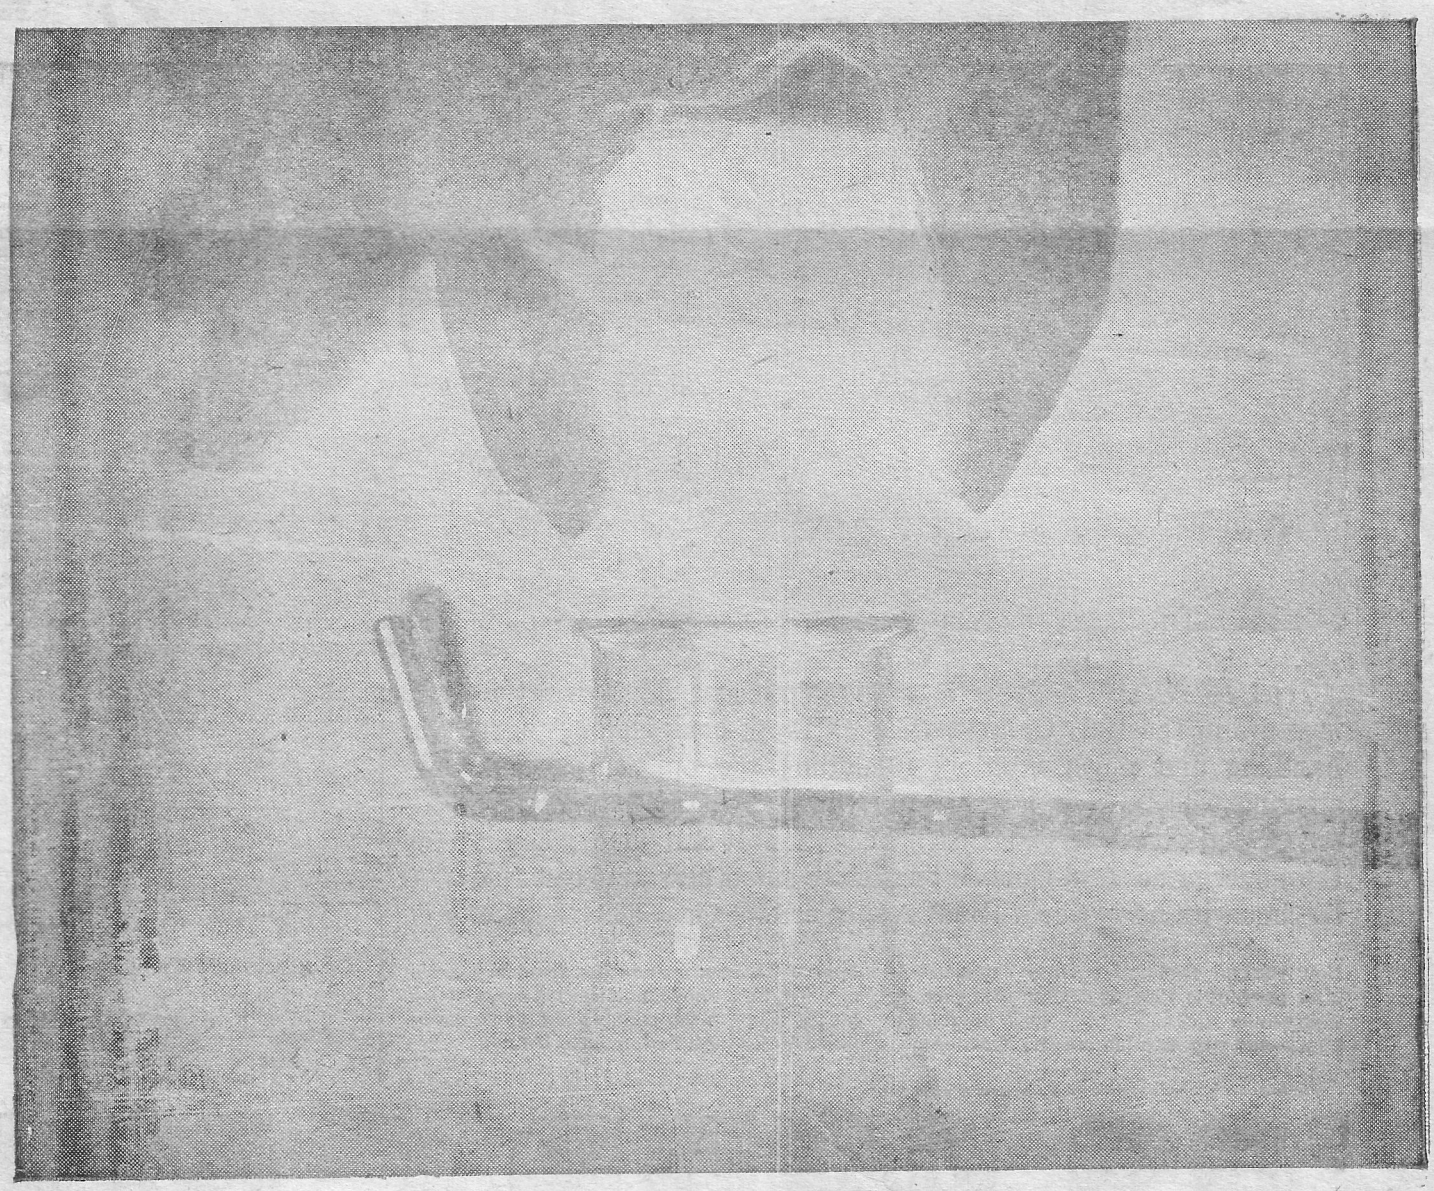
90% of all oil company product research in Canada is done by Imperial

At Imperial Oil's laboratories at Sarnia, Ontario, more than 200 scientists and technicians are working to improve present petroleum products—and to develop new ones. Their research covers many fields, from gasolines to household detergents. Another 130 scientists and technicians are working at Imperial's Calgary laboratories on ways to find and produce more Canadian crude oil and natural gas. Imperial does more research than all other oil companies in Canada combined.



Every barrel of crude oil contains some of the sun's heat. Imperial research works to unlock more of this energy. After five years' intensive research, Imperial found a chemical additive which makes more heating oil available from Canadian crude oil. One important result: less oil imported to heat Canadian homes.

Civil Defence Chooses Posts

Four communities surrounding Edmonton, Morinville, Leduc, Redwater and Stony Plain, have been selected as civil defence garrison posts following the completion of a resources survey by the Edmonton Civil Defence Organization.

The survey was conducted in co-operation with provincial government civil defence officials and the communities affected.

Hawaii Comes To Canada With Arrival Of Singer

VANCOUER, B.C. — Hawaii came o Canada on Sunday with the arrival of the island's first Lady of Song, the famed Haunani and her troupe of dancers and singers from the Royal Hawaiian Hotel on Waikiki Beach.

The group, with Moxie Whitney's Royal Hawaiian Hotel Orchestra, arrived in Vancouver at 5:05 p.m. aboard a Canadian Pacific Airlines jetliner from Honolulu to start a two-week tour of Canada.

Show will be staged in Calgary, Edmonton, Banff, Winnipeg and the Royal York Hotel in Toronto, where Whitney and his crew started their climb to musical fame.

Haunani's latest Capital records release, which came out just two weeks ago, has already become an outstanding hit, with sale of over 50,000. A second release is scheduled to come out in Canada during her tour. It promises something special, medley of old Hawaiian songs and chants with rock n' roll overtones. The other side of the record features the background music of Mutiny on the Bounty.
